To help you begin your World War II Soldier research project with greater ease, save you time, money and frustration, especially if the records burned, I have compiled several forms and checklists to help you pull information together. The more information you are able to provide up front, the easier it is for me to research the service. This also helps me not duplicate work you have already done.

The most important pieces of information you can provide include:

_____ Full name of soldier

_____ Dates and places of birth and, if applicable, death

_____ Service Number

_____ Unit(s) in which he or she served, down to the company level if possible with the dates you believe the soldier was in that unit. This information is often found on the Discharge and Separation Papers or Individual Deceased Personnel File (IDPF)

_____ Names of training camps, forts, bases, stations, or ships and approximate dates at locations

_____ Copies of all documents and letters that contain any service clues, photographs, or links to websites where information is located. Even the smallest mention of service can help move research forward. These items are especially important if you wish to have me write a book about your soldier at the completion of the project.

Where can you find the information I seek? This packet includes several documents to help you locate sources within your home and online. These include:

Military Service Questionnaire

Military Home Source Checklist

Military Records Online Checklist

Home Front Materials and Public Resources

What is the best way to get me the information you have gathered?

The fastest way is for you to scan the documents, letters, photographs, etc. and upload them to a folder on DropBox, a free resource. (<http://dropbox.com>) Then share the folder to me at research@wwiirwc.com. Please ask me if you need assistance creating a DropBox account and folder. You can also transfer files via WeTransfer or other means.

Another option is to snail mail me copies of the documents and photographs. Please do not send original materials. My address is on my client contract.

I'm looking forward to helping you with your project!

Military Records Online Checklist

After completing the military service questionnaire and exploring home sources, also check online sources for digitized records which often contain clues. Name, rank, unit, serial/service numbers and dates of changes in unit are important clues.

The purpose of this list is to provide ideas on where to find information available in digital format.

The most popular websites for this type of information include: American Battle Monuments Commission (ABMC), Ancestry.com, FindAGrave, Fold3.com, National Archives, and Newspapers.com. This is not an exhaustive list of online websites or record sets. Websites change daily and it is impossible to track every change to records online.

Exploring the life of our soldier also includes looking at life on the Home Front. What did the soldier's family endure and how did they assist the war effort? What materials might you find to describe life on the Home Front? What Public Record Resources may help complete your story? Incorporating these aspects into your soldier's story provides greater context to the war years.
