Private Everett M. Callaway, 34996752, Company
Infantry Regiment, 90th Infantry Division, United States extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations an armed enemy:

A platoon of Company G, 357th Infantry, was given the mission of seizing and holding a large mill atop a hill on the opposite side of an open snow covered valley. A heavy machine gun platoon of Company H, 357th Infantry, was attached to support the attack. Enemy machine guns and other automatic weapons were set up to cover the valley and protect the mill, but the platoons made the crossing and the fight began for the final occupation of the mill by the attacking forces. Private Callaway stayed outside the mill for a time, but was finally forced inside by the intense enemy fire. A medical aid man was wounded while crossing at the time the main body attacked and because of the intensity of the enemy fire in the area no one was able to reach him until Private Callaway jumped out of the window and began firing his machine gun to cover two other soldiers who went after the aid man. Private Callaway killed six German soldiers and knocked out two enemy machine guns while the other men were rescuing the aid man. He left the gun only to assist in getting the aid man through the window and under cover. As he was doing this he was seriously wounded by enemy machine gun fire, but despite his wound he again returned to his gun and took up the fight. Before being again forced to leave his gun because of his wound, he was successful in holding off much of the fire against the men attacking the enemy's positions.

SUBJECT: Recommendation for Distinguished-Service Cross.

TO : Commanding General, Third U. S. Army, APO 403, U. S. Army.

1. a. It is recommended that Everett M. Callaway, 34996752, Private, Infantry, Company H, 357th Infantry, be awarded the Distinguished-Service Cross. Private Callaway is now in the hospital.

b. Private Callaway was serving as a Private, Gunner, and was a Gunner, Company H, 357th Infantry, at the time of the act or service for which this award is recommended.

c. Name and address of nearest relative: Daisy Mary Callaway, (mother), 438 S. First St., Albemarle, N. C.

d. Entered military service from: North Carolina.

e. Decorations previously awarded: None.

f. The entire service of Private Callaway has been honorable since the rendition by him of the act or service upon which this recommendation is based.

g. A similar recommendation for this individual has not been submitted.

2. The officer recommending this award has personal knowledge of the act or service upon which this recommendation is based.

3. Private Everett M. Callaway, while serving with the Army of the United States, distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy:

On 11 January 1945, the second heavy machine gun platoon of Company H, 357th Infantry, was attached to Company G. The mission of Company G was to attack and seize Sonlez, Luxembourg. The first section of this platoon was in support of the first platoon of Company G. This platoon's mission was to capture a large mill which was situated across an open snow covered valley.

Enemy machine guns and other automatic weapons were set up to cover the valley and protect the mill. The first platoon and the machine gun section had to cross this valley to reach their objective. Despite very heavy casualties this crossing was made and the objective reached. A few of the men were able to get inside and begin the fight for the mill. Private Callaway remained outside to man his gun in order to keep the men inside protected. German machine guns were firing at him and into the house and he was finally forced to leave his gun because of the intensity of this fire, and he entered the mill.

201-Callaway, Everett M. (Enl) Recommendation Distinguished Service Cross, 19 Jan 45, contd)

A medical aid man attached to Company G was wounded while fighting the valley but because of the intensity of the enemy fire in this area no one was able to reach him until Private Callaway crawled out of a window and began firing his machine gun to cover two more soldiers who went after the aid man. Private Callaway killed six German soldiers and knocked out two machine guns while the other men were rescuing the aid man. He left the gun only to assist in getting the aid man through the window. As he was doing this he was seriously wounded by German machine gun fire.

Despite his wound he again returned to his gun and took up the fight. Before being again forced to leave his gun because of the wound, he was successful in holding off much of the fire against the men attacking the mill. This action enabled Company G to accomplish its mission successfully.

Private Callaway's acts not only aided in the prompt treatment of a seriously wounded man, but also permitted the taking of the mill by keeping other enemy troops from coming to the aid of the enemy mill garrison.

Everett M. Callaway, 34996752, Private, Infantry, 357th Infantry, United States Army. For extraordinary heroism in action on 11 January 1945 in the vicinity of Senlez, Luxembourg. During a fierce attack on a mill, Private Callaway gained entrance to the building. Observing a wounded man lying in the valley leading to the mill, he placed effective machine gun cover fire for two men attempting to rescue the casualty. He killed six enemy and knocked out two machine guns while the rescue of the wounded man was being accomplished. Though Private Callaway was wounded while helping to place the casualty in the building, he again manned his machine gun and before being forced to leave for treatment of his wound, neutralized much of the enemy fire directed against the friendly troops attacking the mill. His extraordinary heroism aided the platoon in taking its objective and was in accordance with highest military traditions. Entered Military Service from North Carolina.
